Trypsin is prescribed for the treatment of infections, inflammation associated with injuries and surgery wounds. As an adjuvant treatment, Trypsin is indicated for the management of edema associated with dental procedures and inflammation.

Bromelain, a phytoproduct, is prescribed for reduction of edema associated with surgical wounds and sinusitis. Bromelain is also used to treat ulcerative colitis, hay fever, pulmonary edema and shortening of labor. Bromelain can stimulate muscle contraction and prevent cancer. Bromelain is effective against osteoarthritis, if administered with Trypsin and Rutoside.

Rutoside can reduce the incidence of haemorrhage associated with diverse etiology.
